Jeff Bezos is the founder and CEO of Amazon, one of the world's largest online retailers. He is also an investor and philanthropist.

Bezos was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, in 1964. His mother, Jacklyn, was a teenage single mother, and his father, Ted, was a Cuban immigrant who worked as a chemical engineer.

Bezos was raised in Houston, Texas, and he graduated from Princeton University in 1986 with a degree in electrical engineering and computer science.

After graduation, Bezos worked on Wall Street for a few years before he quit his job to start Amazon in 1994.

Amazon was originally a online bookstore, but it soon began selling a variety of other products, such as music, videos, and electronics.

The company has since expanded into a variety of other businesses, such as cloud computing, artificial intelligence, and consumer goods.

Bezos is now one of the richest men in the world, with a net worth of over $100 billion. He has also given away billions of dollars to charity.

In 1994, Jeff Bezos founded Amazon.com, an online bookseller that became one of the world's largest retailers. He is also the founder of Blue Origin, an aerospace company that is developing technology to enable private human space travel.
