

In his new book, Jeff Bezos: The House That Jeff Built, author Walter Isaacson chronicles the life and times of the Amazon founder and CEO.

Bezos was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, in 1964, the son of a teenage mother and a father who was an environmental scientist. He was a bright kid who loved computers and space, and he went on to study physics at Princeton University. After graduation, he worked on Wall Street, and then he founded Amazon in 1994.

Under Bezos' leadership, Amazon has become one of the world's most powerful companies. It started out as an online bookstore, but it quickly expanded into other areas, such as e-commerce, cloud computing, and artificial intelligence. Amazon is now worth more than $1 trillion, and Bezos is the world's richest man.

Bezos is a visionary leader who has changed the way we shop and consume. He is also a controversial figure, as he has been criticized for putting profits before people. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that he is a brilliant entrepreneur who has had a profound impact on the world.

In his latest real estate purchase, Jeff Bezos has nabbed a $165 million mansion in Beverly Hills—the most expensive home ever sold in California.

The 13,600-square-foot estate was built in 1935 and sits on nearly four acres of land. It has 12 bedrooms, 21 bathrooms, and three guesthouses.

The property was originally listed for $225 million, but Bezos was able to snag it for $60 million less.

This is just the latest in a string of high-priced homes Bezos has bought in the past few years. In 2016, he paid $23.5 million for a home in Washington, D.C., and in 2018, he shelled out $80 million for a sprawling estate in New York.

With a net worth of $131 billion, Bezos is the world's richest man, and he shows no signs of slowing down.
